Casino, the Bea House and tire-burning: A year to remember in the Gorge

by Kevin Gorman, Executive Director, kevin@gorgefriends.org

1999 Accomplishments & Milestones

Several rooms with a view: Friends celebrated a significant victory in the continuing Bea House saga when a Washington State Superior Court Judge supported the Gorge Commission's decision that the house be moved. Both the Beas and Skamania County appealed the decision to the Washington Supreme Court, where the case is pending. With Friends' media efforts, the story caught the attention of ABC News, The New York Times, The Washington Post, USA Today and People Magazine.

Gambling with the Gorge: Friends worked with members and Gorge residents to encourage Governor Kitzhaber to reject the proposed casino at Cascade Locks. The proposed 75,000 square-foot casino would have perched on a peninsula of the Columbia River just off I-84.

Gorge Commission funding restored: Salem and Olympia were not known for their Gorge lovers in 1997 when both state legislatures cut the Gorge Commission's budget by more than 50%. In 1999 Friends worked with members and Gorge residents to restore the Commission's funding and allow the Commission to move into its all-important review of the Management Plan in 2000. Restoration of Gorge Commission funding was one of the few environmental victories in the 1999 Oregon legislature.

Building a Vision: The Columbia River Gorge Vision 2000 Campaign got underway and a steering committee of mostly Gorge residents met monthly to shape the coalition's activities. At the top of the list: the completion of the Washougal-to-Stevenson Trail and its centerpiece Cape Horn Rim Park.

Getting the word out: Friends had more than 50 speaking engagements in Portland, Vancouver and the Gorge. Friends volunteer speakers reached more than 1,200 people.

Tire-Burning test goes down in flames:
In a victory for air-breathers, the Washington Department of Ecology

People of all ages pitch in to protect the Gorge's beauty. Here, young volunteers pull ivy to protect native plants.

The Columbia River Gorge is a treasure we all share. Through efforts to protect and enhance the Gorge's scenic, natural, recreational and cultural resources, Friends of the Columbia Gorge works to ensure that the Gorge remains a priceless natural wonder for our children and future generations.

Friends' Outreach

Members and volunteers made a difference in the Gorge in 1999

by Becky Douglas, Volunteer Coordinator, becky@gorgefriends.org

In 1999 Friends' outreach program did just that — reached out to thousands with the support of hundreds of our members and volunteers. Here is just a sampling of some of Friends of the Columbia Gorge's 1999 outreach activities:

Restoration projects

- Tree planting with 35 volunteers and Friends of Trees at the Sandy River Delta.
- Clean up with 28 volunteers at Benson State Park.
- Litter pick-up with volunteers at Multnomah Falls.
- Trail work with 27 volunteers and the Chinook Trail Association at Lewis and Clark State Park Nature Trail.
- Invasive Species Removal with Barbara Robinson and 12 Nike employees at the Columbia Gorge Discovery Center.

Lobbying

Two Salem Lobby Day sessions with more than 20 volunteers at each session lobbying their state representatives and senators.

Speakers Bureau

More than 50 speaking presentations and tablings by 20 trained speakers to more than 1,500 people throughout Washington and Oregon.

Activists

More than 260 activists joined our e-mail alert network to respond to action alerts regarding Gorge events and legislation.

Thank you to all the volunteers who helped make Friends so successful in 1999 — we look forward to more great outreach efforts in 2000!

Year in Review (continued)

reversed its decision of “non-significance” for a test to burn 10 tons of tires per day at the SDS Lumber Mill in Bingen. The reversal came after an outcry from Friends and Gorge residents.

Illegal business shut down: Friends and Multnomah County won a Multnomah County Circuit Court decision to shut down the Viewpoint Inn prior to a Gorge Commission hearing; the “non-profit” Inn was operating as a for-profit business and violated numerous conditions of its permit.

Litigation as a last resort: Rather than going to court against county land-use decisions, Friends reached agreements with two landowners on decisions that otherwise would have ultimately headed to court. In both cases, the landowners received their building permits and Friends ensured that natural and scenic resources would be protected.

Land acquisition stalled: Friends spent much of the year working with other landowners and land trust groups to push the Forest Service to spend its $7 million in allocated, yet unspent, funding. While the Forest Service averted federal legislation that would have mandated arbitration in land acquisition, our efforts did force the Forest Service to make significant changes in its acquisition program. Stay tuned.

Stopping to smell the flowers: Thousands participated in the Spring Wildflower Hikes sponsored by Friends and several other organizations.

Securing our Future: Friends created an endowment with a $300,000 investment and raised more than $80,000 in the last few months of the year to add to it. In addition, large gifts ($1,000 or more) toward our operating expenses increased 130% over 1998.

We look forward to the challenges, accomplishments and surprises 2000 is sure to bring. Thanks for joining us.

The Fundraising Year-in-Review

by Jane Haley, Development Director, jane@gorgefriends.org

1999 was a remarkable year for Friends of the Columbia Gorge in many respects, and fundraising and donor development are part of that success story. Highlights include:

- Establishment of an Endowment Fund and raising nearly $80,000 from loyal, long-time supporters.
- Nearly doubling our general membership goal of $60,000 to over $118,000 from more than 3,200 members.
- Exceeding our goal for major donors by more than 30%, raising nearly $120,000.

1999 Foundation Support

The success of the past year could not have come without the strong support of a number of charitable foundations. Our sincere thanks goes out to:

Brainerd Foundation
 Bullitt Foundation
 Burning Foundation
 Clark Foundation
